Topic: UPDATE: Pot Belly Pig

STATUS UPDATE:

The pot belly pig found roaming the streets of Hurst early Tuesday morning has been identified and we are in contact with the owners.

A Hurst resident was pig sitting Miss "Molly" for their friend. Apparently Molly escaped from the sitter's back yard and wandered into a neighboring yard during the early morning hours Tuesday. We believe that Molly was then attacked by a dog in that yard, which explains her injuries. In addition to the laceration to her head, Animal Services inspection and observation of Molly revealed Molly also sustained several puncture wounds to her upper back and neck area. As a result of these injuries, Molly was taken to a local veterinarian yesterday for further treatment.

Although her injuries are not life threatening, Miss Molly was held overnight for continued observation and treatment, and is recovering very well.
